CITIZEN OF TUCSON

URGES STATEHOOD

WASHINGTON, May 1.—"Certainly Arizona, and for that matter, New Mexico, is entitled to statehood," said Henry J. Bowen of Tucson at the Arlington hotel, in this city.

"Nevada was admitted as a state with less population than either New Mexico or Arizona," continued Mr. Bowen. "Both territories have ample population to support state governments. Maybe we will have to wait through a few more congresses, but we will get there after a while."

WASHINGTON, May 1.—

"Irrigation is making some of the desert and arid regions of Arizona blossom like a garden. There are immense tracts that are uninhabited, and like the Texas panhandle twenty years ago, sections of country as large as an Illinois county have only a few sheep herders living within their bounds."

Still there are plenty of people to carry on a state government, and we are entitled to it, just as much as any of the other states. We are going to get it, too.

"People think that Arizona is still the wild west, but I give you my word it is as peaceful and as civilized as Broadway, New York. We need settlers, of course, for there is plenty of room for them, and new people always receive a warm welcome there from the natives."
